

About the Author

AvvaSarrahann is the author of a spiritual concept of the evolution of consciousness, developed over many years and presented through a series of lectures and works devoted to the future of humanity and its place in the Universe. His long-term research explores the nature of the human being, the inner evolution of consciousness, and the future development of humanity.

The name AvvaSarrahann carries symbolic meaning and reflects the idea of serving the unity of humanity and preparing for the transition to a new civilizational era.

Within the framework of the developed Methodology, the author interprets the Biblical tradition as a symbolic description of stages in the evolution of human consciousness and proposes an integral model of human and civilizational development based on the principles of inner transformation, Sobornost (Conciliarity), and Unity.

Over several decades, he has developed a comprehensive concept that views human history as a process of the progressive expansion of consciousness and the emergence of higher forms of human unity.

The proposed approach brings together elements of anthropology, spiritual tradition, and civilizational foresight, viewing the human being as a participant in an ongoing process of inner development.

At the heart of this work lies a fundamental question:

What must the human being become so that new technological capabilities, including artificial intelligence, can serve the development of civilization and the realization of human potential?